BUT ONE SHIP LEFT IN WHALING PORT

New Bedford's Sea Era Drawing to Close.

New Bedford, Mass.—Another heroic chapter in the history of New England, filled with the exploits of strong men in combat with the giants of the sea, is drawing to a close.

This old sea port, that has been home to hundreds of sail of whalers, now can boast only one whaling ship. The schooner John R. Manta remains. But the "last of the whalers," for most of the old-time whalemen are dead, and the Manta's only hope of recruiting a crew is to sail across the Atlantic ocean to the Azores.

A few years ago, when this city was the heyday of whaling, when this port teemed with the activity of the whaling barks, when men sailed away on seemingly interminable voyages, while wives and families of seamen and captains haunted the "widows' walks" on the fold-line houses, hoping to catch a glimpse of a returning ship. But those who remember are growing old and some are nearing the century mark.

Results Whaling Thrills.

Among those who remember keenly those earlier days is Capt. Ulysses S. Mayhew of West Tisbury, on the island of Martha's Vineyard. His youthful appearance and spirit belie his fourscore years. In his life he has had adventures and experiences that would cram more than one movie "thriller."

As a boy in his 'teens he made his first whaling voyage during the Civil war. On that trip he learned about stalking the whale in small boats, harpooning the downward rush of the wounded whale and the peril to the small boat as the rope ran off from the shrieking windlass. And he learned how the "kill" at last was effected, with lance or bomb-gun.

Last Survivor of Lafayette Crew.

Captain Mayhew believes he is the last survivor of the crew of the bark Lafayette, burned and sunk with two other Yankee ships off Fernando de Noronha, Brazilian convict island, by the Confederate warship Alabama.

After a series of adventures he was sent back by the United States consul from Brazil and promptly shipped on another whaler. On this next trip ago he saw the U. S. S. Kearsarge at Fayal, in the Azores, just after it had sunk the Alabama.

It is a far cry, he says, from those old days to the modern times that have seen the typical old whaling barks Greyhound and Wanderer pass Of those proud times, only the schooner John R. Manta remains. And New Bedford has long since turned from whaling to its great cotton textile mills.

Wives Jealous, Taxicab Drivers Change Plans

Brooklyn, N. Y.—A new code of the bitter controversy among members of the South Brooklyn and Bay Ridge Taxicab association over the advisability of admitting women into the organization came to light recently at a meeting in the Admiral Dewey council clubhouse.

The association was on the verge of capitulating to the request, it was learned, when somehow the wives of several members got wind of what was going on and now the chances of putting through this co-membership idea don't look so good.

This latest development was revealed by Harry Carlson, an officer of the organization, who addressed the men when his wife heard about the plan she wasn't at all in favor of it." Carlson added:

"You know yourself that if the wife of one of our members should come in here during a meeting some night and find her husband sitting between two strange women it wouldn't look so good for him."

And so the resolution which would admit the feminine gear ahead of the membership definitely has been relegated to the table, on which it was placed several months ago, and the members admit that the only way it can be taken off is by a change of heart on the part of their better halves, which they seem to sense is not likely.

PERSIAN MOSLEMS OBSERVE OLD RITE

Carry On Bloody Mourning Ceremony in Secret.

Constantinople, Turkey. — Slashing their foreheads and necks with sharp swords, lashing their bare backs with chains and beating their breasts with their palms, 7,000 Persian residents of Stamboul preceded in evading the Turkish police and carrying on this year as much their annual mourning for two men slain 1,300 years ago.

The Persians were warned that the Turkish government intended this year to put a stop to the gory demonstration, staged every year on the tenth night of the moon in the Moslem month of Moultaharem.

But they gathered secretly in the courtyard of an ancient han, hidden in a shabby corner of Stamboul, and laying costly Persian carpets on the cobblestones where camel caravans used to unload their burdens, they constructed an impromptu mosque wherein to follow the spectacular rites.

Persians have performed the ceremony on this night for thirteen centuries in memory of Hassan and Hussein, grandsons of the Prophet Mohammed, who were murdered by an usurping caliph.

Turkish police, arriving on the scene after the barbaric moonlight orgy was over, arrested some hundred of the self-wounded, bleeding participants while a thousand more packed in the courtyard rent the night with the wailing and sobs of "Hussein! Hussein! Ya, Hussein!"

A black-robed, black-gloved Persian priest, mopping his eyes with a huge black handkerchief, worked himself into a frenzy while he wailed over and over the story of the assassination in all its grossest details, telling of how the young Hassan was poisoned by his own treacherous wife, in accordance of the villainous caliph, and of how Hussein, wandering barefoot, with thirst in the desert of Damascus, was found by the usurper's men and beheaded.

Though both Persians and Turks are Moslems, the Persians belong to the Shiite sect, which refused to recognize the line of caliphs founded by the usurper.

Since the Seventeenth century all Turks have been Sunnites. Nowadays some 10,000 Persian Shiites reside in Turkey peacefully and the only opposition by the Turkish government is its attempt to put a stop to the annual flagellations of its Persian guests.

CHILD KING PREFERS "MICKY" TO MAJESTY

He'll Make a Good Fireman, Marie Decides.

Sinaia, Rumania.—King Michael I, Rumania's five-year-old sovereign, dashed down the concrete walk of the royal summer palace here a couple of days ago in his red-painted, miniature American automobile, almost bowling over Dowager Queen Marie as he went. Ahead of him raced his favorite dog, Mumbo. They imagined themselves going to a fire.

"Madcap Micky," as Queen Marie calls her romping, irrepressible grandson, was shrieking, blowing a whistle and ordering even royalty out of his path. Queen Marie, who was taking a stroll in the palace grounds with the little king's mother, Princess Helen, and former King George of Greece, said jocularly:

"Well, if he doesn't make a good king he surely will make a first-class fireman."

Prefers "Micky" to Majesty.

When the correspondent of the Associated Press asked Queen Marie to describe the boy king, she said:

"He hasn't the remotest idea what the events of the last fortnight mean. He can't understand why people make such a fuss over him. He wants to be called 'Micky' and not 'your majesty.'"

"Like all other children, he is intensely fond of fairy tales, and stories of adventure and daring. He exults with joy and triumph when the villain in a legend has his head cut off or when some wicked character is shut up in a dungeon or eaten alive by wolves. He also loves flowers, a trait which I suppose he gets from me. Knowing my love for flowers, he goes to the palace gardens, pokes little noseguys and puts them at my disposal in the morning. He also takes delight in swimming, riding his pony and picnicking."

The queen said that the little king always speaks English to his mother and Queen Marie, but Rumanian to others.

Has Few Playmates.

"Micky has been kept very much at home by his mother," said Queen Marie, "and therefore hasn't many playmates. Helen puts him to bed at 6:30 or 7 p. m. in the evening. He is up again by 6:30 or 7:30 a. m. in the morning. Help is near when he is out on the lawn, mounted on his scooter or his chauffeur-driven car.

"His chauffeur-lackey sees his unusual intelligence, precocious nature, curiosity and mischievousness. His mother is very jealous, but Micky declines going to church because the services are so long."

The queen said that Michael had not fully realized that his grandfather, Ferdinand, was dead and the little fellow constantly looked for the king, which she has forgiven in the habit of giving him daily.

Present, Says Visitor

Washington.—"If you are curious about the past, travel in Europe. But if you would learn of the present and future, tour the United States from coast to coast. That is the lesson which enthusiastic Commission of Agenaires says he learned during a 10,000-mile automobile trip across the country.

"I saw man yet involved in conquering nature," Mr. Tourgeau explained. "It made me realize the endless effort of the American people, especially in the agricultural sections. Argentina, a similar country, has much to learn from your methods.

"Where in Europe everywhere is conserving your natural resources. Unnecessary exploitation of nature is discouraged. Even the animals are protected by signs, 'Shoot only with your camera.' Natural and rather pleasant observation is made."

He regretted that he was unable to see the ambassador's wife during the small towns stopped only at every table milk instead of wine.

Dishes Patrick Henry Ate Told in Book

Washington. — Handwritten cook books, antedating the Civil war and now in the possession of Mrs. Nancy Mance of Virginia, will be incorporated in the "Old Fashion Cook Book" to be published this summer by the Woman's National Democratic club.

Mrs. Muncie inherited these recipe books from departed ladies of past generations who thought nothing of mentioning eggs by the dozen and cream by the quart. Most of them were handed down from mother to daughter for generations, by word of mouth or in writing.

One of the old books is called "Patrick Henry's Cook Book." Although not actually his property, it is composed of recipes of dishes liked by his family and probably eaten by him many times. On the fly leaf, in faded, delicate writing is inscribed the statement that these recipes were "drawn off at bed side, by Patsy Henry home in Virginia, by Mrs. Elvira M. Taylor, one of his direct descendants.

Reveals Recipe for Famed Singing Hinnie

Dublin, Ireland.—Everybody in Ireland knows what a singing hinnie is. Consequently there was much surprise when country dwellers read in London dispatches that Mrs. T. S. Moore, wife of the secretary for the Northern Ireland cabinet, had given English women the recipe for the first time at a London cookery demonstration. How to make this popular Irish country dish is known to every Irish housewife is:

"Take a pound of flour, one teaspoonful of currants, three-fourths pound of butter, one cup of margarine, one teaspoonful of baking powder and sufficient sweet milk to mix to the consistency of pancake dough.

"The hinnies are cooked on a griddle and are best when eaten hot. They should be split and buttered."

Who Cares About "Whom," 'Shall,' or 'Will'? Asks Jury

Chicago.—Twenty-two authors, editors, business men and teachers, who returned their verdict to Prof. S. A. Leonard of the University of Wisconsin, acting for the national council of teachers of English, has put an O. K. on misuse of "shall" and "will" and "who" and "whom."

Under the new rules, which have been hanging fire since 1923, "whom" may be dropped from speech and writing by the public, however.

"None of them are here."

"Will you be at the Browns' this evening?"

"Who are you looking for?"

"I feel as though I should go, and you should go also."

"Any room in the house for more chairs in the room."

"Can I be excused?"

"That clock must be fixed."

"Try and get it."

Some members of the jury said they would accept all these idioms. Virtually every member of the jury said the hidebound rules of rhetoric were fast giving way. Nice distinctions between "will" and "shall," "who" and "whom" are passing to everyday speech in favor of originality and forceful sense.

Father Darkleaf's Column

The local post of the American Legion has gone on record as endorsing the use of Legionnaires as census-takers during the big national nose-counting next year.

Ah, woe is me! As this page slips on the presses we have no idea how many pags we will have today or how far we shall get in setting up news items and ads ere the deadline rolls around for the papers to start to the post-office. Right now we hope we can squeeze by without leaving out much.

Father Darkleaf doesn't know what to make of that letter he received this week from one of the big movie studios in Hollywood, California, this week asking for pictures and information about a young man here in our county. However, we will give him all the boost we can.

Do folks read newspapers? Well, ever since last week's paper carried a write-up on the nice orders at the local battery plant, they have been swamped with applications for work.

County agent Hudgins reports finding two dead 'possums near his home, maybe landmarks of the recent anti-rat campaign.

We saw the following in a$_{n}$ exchange several weeks ago, and clipped it out to pass on to our readers. Before we could get to it, we had it handed to us by several readers and saw it ourselves in a number of papers, so by now it has been generally circulated. Here it is, however, in case you missed it:

Socialism: you have two cows and you give one to your neighbor.

Communism: You have two cows and give both to the Government and the Government gives you the milk.

Fascism: You keep the cows, and give the milk to the Government, and the Government sells it back to you.

Nazism: The Government shoots you and takes both the cows.

New Dealism: (I) n e Government shoots one cow, milks the other and pours the milk down the sink.

Capitalism: You sell one cow and buy a Bull.

Republicanism: you keep both cows until they starve to death, and then pay taxes on their carcasses.

Every year we get all anxious to see Appomattox have a community Christmas tree. Always, however, comes the question: where would you put it? and there just doesn't seem to be a suitable place. (To light up a tree u. the school grounds is about the best we have ever done, but somehow our idea of a community tree would place it in the business section. Since there are no available places in the business section, we suggest that by another year arrangements be paid to have colored street lights down town. Incidently, local merchants are to be congratulated on their fine Christmas assortments this year. We really believe they are the best ever offered here.

NOTICE: Once again we will publish as many Santa Claus letters as space permits. Please send them in as early as possible, so we won't be swamped at the last issue before Christmas and have to leave out yours. —The Editor.

HEADS CENSUS OFFICE

ALEXANDER HUDGINS

The appointment of Alexander Hudgins, of Blackstone, publisher of several Southside Virginia weekly newspapers, as supervisor of the census for the Fourth Congressional District, was announced today by the D partment of Commerce.

Bayard M. Spencer, of Fort Mitchell, Lunenburg county, was named as assistant supervisor to work with Mr. Hudgins in handling the work for the fifteen counties and two cities in this area.

Mr. Hudgins will be required to open the Census office in Petersburg this month and the enumerators throughout the area will work from this office.

Mr. Hudgins, who has been editor of the Courier-Record in Blackstone for the past four years, is a graduate of Hampden-Sydney college and up until his present occupation was connected with a paper in Richmond.

Mr. Spencer, who is a merchant at Ft Mitchell, was a director in the Lunenburg county area for the South Hill Production Credit Association. He served as supervisor of the agricultural census for the sixth Virginia district in 1935 and supervised the business census for the Fourth Virginia district in 1936. He is a member of the Lunenburg county board of public welfare.

Bonnie Blue Flag

The Bonnie Blue flag was made of silk by the ladies of Jackson, Miss., and is said to have inspired the famous battle song of that name. The flag was presented to W. S. Barry, president of the convention that adopted the ordinance of secession in the house of representatives at Jackson, Miss., January 9, 1861. It had a white ground with magnolia trees in the center; a blue field in the upper left-hand corner with a star in the center. It was finished with a red border with red fringe at the extremity of the flag.

American Eagle

The American eagle, sometimes known as the bald eagle, is entirely bereft of hirsute adornment than the Seven Sutherland Sisters. He merely has white feathers on his head which makes him look bald from a distance. The American eagle had many characteristics which make him a particularly fitting national bird. In the first place, he is the only eagle peculiar to this country. Then, the American eagle is not known to leave our continent except to the nearby Siberian coast opposite Alaska.

Cowboy's 'Dogie'

Dogie is the name given by cowboys to a motherless calf or to any ill-nourished, scrubby calf, and as a term of contempt, to all cattle. The weak calves naturally lag behind the rest of the herd on a drive and must continually be urged forward. Hence in cowboy songs the chorus frequently has a repetition of "Get along, little dogie," or "Roll along, little dogie."

Town Budget For 1940 Passed By Council

The town council of Appomattox adopted its budget for the year 1940 at its regular monthly meeting on Monday night, F. L. Murphy, chairman of the finance committee, submitted a tentative budget of $6,80(for the town's general fund, and kept the items in balance with estimated revenues. The general fund indebtedness of $1,500 will be curtailed $1,000 during the year, according to the budget. Street lights, water rents and salaries consume over one-half of the budget total. Street labor and materials take up another $1,000, while auto and truck insurance, and routine expenditures comprise only about $200 to go into the "miscellaneous fund."

The new sewer fund is balanced by maintenance costs and a sinking fund to pay interest and principal on the sewer bonds.

A study of town receipts so far during 1939, shows that the town has collected less in fines than during 1938. Collections in 1938 were $536.05 from fines, and thus far in 1939, fines have yielded $348.50. However, there are a few more days in the current year, and a few convictions in the town court might effect the comparative totals. During the month of November, there was such a lull in town legal procedure that not a single case was tried.

PRICE—ANDRIOLA

Mr. and Mrs. James Andriola, of 140 Kimball Terrace, Yonkers, New York, have announced the marriage of their daughter, Florence, to Mr. James Carlton Price, of Appomattox. The wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride in Yonkers, on September 16, 1939.

Mrs. Price is a graduate of Yonkers high school and Misericordia Hospital School of Nursing, in New York City. She was a member of the Army Corps, United States Army at the time of her marriage. Mr. Price is a graduate of the E. C. Glass high school, Lynchburg, and was graduated from the Virginia Polytechnic Institute in 1934. For three years after his graduation, Mr. Price was engaged in the practice of engineering with the United States Government and for two years served as First Lieutenant, United States States Army Engineers Reserve, which time was spent as Company Commander of 2352 CCC, Baynesville, Virginia.

Mr. Price was appointed this week as Appomattox County Surveyor.

Mr. and Mrs. Price will make their home here after December 10th.

Buenos Aires Racket

With the arrest of four men in Buenos Aires, a racket that had for its object a large-scale fleecing of taxpayers has been broken up. The racketeers after establishing offices hired a staff of agents and equipped them with fake official checkbooks bearing the national arms of Argentina. Persons behind in their payments of inland revenues were interviewed. After inquiring the amount of capital each business worked with and how much the average monthly receipts amounted to, the agents offered to intervene in the settlement of the obligations, charging fees that ranged from $5 to $50. About $3,000 had been collected before the racket was discovered and stopped.

Study Vocation Plans Of Appomattox Students

Professor L. Crawley, principal of the Appomattox high school, has announced results of an interesting vocational study made at the local school. Professor Crawley says, "The school system now insists that our school should meet the needs of its pupils and much progress is being made along that line. Last week a survey was made of each high school pupil to find out what line of work each expected to follow after leaving school."

Professor Crawley added: "It may be of interest to note the choices made by the pupils themselves, after some instruction in guidance had been made. We would like for our patrons and officials to help us to meet these needs in the best possible manner."

As their life work, the pupils indicated the following:

Tobacco Prices Please Growers In Dark Belt

Growers throughout Virginia's big dark tobacco belt are pleased with price averages thus far in the marketing season. Warehouses opened Monday, December 4, with a full corps of buyers, including those of Imperial Tobacco Co.

Prices have average up to $1.00 per hundred above last year's average of 10.60. Prices of low and medium grades have been especially encouraging. Pegged prices have prevented lower offerings from pulling averages down.

Yesterday the Farmville market sold 188,656 pounds of tobacco at an average price of 10.98. Tuesday the Farmville price average was 11.49. By quality tobacco was selling as well yesterday as any day since the market opened, but warehousemen, said inferior offerings were received.

The Lynchburg market yesterday handled 221,606 pounds at a price average of 10.67.

The Bedford markets handled less than 25,000 pounds yesterday.

For the first time in years, dark tobacco was selling yesterday within two cents a pound average of bright tobacco, which averaged thirteen cents per pound throughout the old belt.

Letter To Santa Claus

Nov. 28, 1939

Dear Santa,

Please bring me a truck, and a tractor, and car, and guns, candy, nuts and sugarplums. And agun, and a train, tractor, a police car and a tank. Please bring Aunt Cora some apple and an orange, a box of crackers. And Daddy a pair of bedroom slippers, and bring Mamie an apron. Don't forget the good boys and girls. Lots of love.

J. Forest Marshall.
